'I was brought up in 85 Blackcroft, a tenement flat. There was no bath in it - you had to go to Constable Street washhouse just to get a bath'

'We moved to Kirkton at that time. Kirkton had opened, and that was the first new house my Mum got, because, well, she had a' the bairns, seven o' a family, there was nine o' we all in the house - 6 Beaully Square'

- Tina Muir

I was born in Temple Lane, just off the West Port...we needed a bigger house, and we got a three roomed house on Annfield Row... between Peddie Street and Annfield Road

- Sheena Wellington

Our City

'Living in Temple Lane, which was just off the Hawkhill, what we found brilliant about it was, everything was within a ten minute walk. We never had to go very far for anything'

'When I was 16....like everybody else at that time, we all had our name down with the council for new housing, 'cos everyone wanted to be rehoused'

'We moved out to Fintry - lovely house, had my own bedroom - had three bedrooms, a lovely kitchen, bathroom, front and back garden'

'This was quite a shock to the system - you missed the noise of the streets...Eight years later my mother and I decided that the best thing for us was to move back to Hawkhill'

- anon

'My memories of the Multis themselves was that there was always 'human toilet' on the staircases, and Graffiti an that a' over the place - a lot o' the times the lifts were'na working. We stayed on the 9th floor, and ye had to walk up'

- Gary Robertson

'We lived in the Hilltown, 77 Hilltown, which was known as 'The Canons' Land', the reason being was that it was owned by...the Parish - St Mary's Forebank.... There was a front land and a back land, and we were in the back land on the ground floor'

- Andrew Ferrie
